Haemorrhage in premature labour. A prospective review of 132 cases of premature labour in 1206 births at term and early labour at term was carried out. Of the women with premature labour 20% had spontaneous preterm delivery, 28% labour induction and 50% spontaneous labour with vaginal delivery at term. Haemorrhage accounted for 25% of the premature deliveries; 15% of these occurred after labour induction or spontaneous labour at term and all but 1 were associated with fetal distress. We conclude that bleeding is a major cause of prematurity and fetal distress. > HSP and self-examination > > "We hope that HSP is able to help us gain some insight into the reasons > underlying HSP and the frequency of HSP in the general population.
