By 1906, with over 106,000 interments, it was the second largest cemetery in the country. It is located at 2285 Cambridge Street in East Cambridge, Massachusetts, on a site on the banks of the Charles River. History Mount Auburn Cemetery was established in 1831 on the grounds of Cambridge College, a private school founded by the Society of the Cincinnati in 1798. Mount Auburn Cemetery is the second-oldest cemetery in the United States, after Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge, Massachusetts. It was established by citizens of Cambridge and Waltham who were dissatisfied with the size, upkeep, and location of the cemetery established in 1822 in Prospect Hill, the present-day site of Brigham Hall. The cemetery was opened for burials on May 18, 1831. The first interment was the body of the Reverend John Elliot, a former president of the College of Cambridge, who died of cholera in 1831. Early burials were interments within the college's cemetery, in the family plot reserved for college presidents, and in the burying grounds of other Cambridge-area churches. There were more than 100,000 burials at Mount Auburn Cemetery by 1902, second only to Mount Hope Cemetery in Boston. The cemetery is the largest in the United States in terms of acreage, at, and it covers an area of, of which are under graves, making it more than twice as large as Green Mount Cemetery in Baltimore, Maryland, the next largest cemetery. As of 2014, it is also the largest in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The cemetery was the subject of the New York Times obituary "Inscribed in Eternity", on its centennial in 1931. The cemetery was the second-largest in the United States until the 1831 Acton Cemetery was consecrated in Acton, Massachusetts, which is also still the largest cemetery in the United States. In 1847, the Board of Overseers of Cambridge College acquired the
