Many people purposely put catnip plants in their homes to lure their cats out of hiding, but beware of a trap. Cats typically don't like the smell of catnip on the leaves and often get stuck in these traps. A cat may be nipping at it and doesn't realize he's caught inside a trap. Read on to learn how to free your cat when he becomes a catnip addict and choose to pick him up and rub him into oblivion with your bare hands. 1. Check Your Catnip The best way to free your cat from a catnip trap is to check for it yourself. A cat may get trapped in a strange room with a catnip plant, and so you'll have to go to the room. Look around for signs that your cat has been captured. Find a catnip trap if you don't know where your cat is. You can't have a catnip trap and not know where it is. If you find the trap, you'll have a better chance of releasing your cat. 2. Remove the Leaves Once you've noticed that your cat is trapped, remove the leaves and wait. If the cat has had a chance to scent-mark the leaves, he may return to where he was stuck. Keep in mind that your cat may be trying to get at the leaves of the catnip plants and fall into the trap. 3. Remind Your Cat to Come Out If your cat has already stuck himself into the trap, you may need to repeat the process. If your cat has left the room or you've scented him somewhere else, you may need to go to 3ef4e8ef8d
