Welcome To 16 Steps Of Crack Manual Methods XTools Pro Activation Codes Download Full Version Software. javascript variable is undefined on initialisation I am having some weird behaviour in javascript. I'm trying to figure out why this below does not work. var btn = document.getElementById('btn_1'); var btnText = btn.text; //undefined btn.addEventListener('click', function(e) { alert(btnText); }); However the below does work. var btn = document.getElementById('btn_1'); var btnText = btn.text; //this works and outputs "btn_1" btn.addEventListener('click', function(e) { alert(btnText); }); So, on first load, I have a weird situation where btnText is undefined (why?), but then if I replace it with btn.text later on, it all works! Anyone any ideas? Thanks in advance. A: You need to use var btn = document.getElementById('btn_1'); inside the click function Edit: I am not sure if the following is what you are looking for. btn.addEventListener('click', function(e) { var btnText = this.text; alert(btnText); }); 3ef4e8ef8d
