*Description* The widget will update daily with the latest exchange rates from Yahoo! Finance*Price* Reference: *Icon* *IconName* A: What a great question. I'll try to write a comprehensive answer. How does a currency exchange work? To make this easy I'll use $ as a stand for currency, that's what you want to exchange in most cases. You first will have to get currency information from a source, then you use that information to calculate the value of currency in another currency. You can do this by dividing the value of the currency in question by the value of currency you want to convert to. This can be done manually by using software (Excell comes to mind), or automatically by using a financial module. The latter is usually built into an accounting tool. Currency conversion can be a pain in the *** if you don't understand what's going on. So I will try to explain this step by step. To start with, a $ can be represented by an amount of currency. Maybe there's a 100 $ bill and you want to know the value in Swiss francs. You do this by dividing the 100 by the exchange rate to Switzerland. Next, the value of the Swiss francs can be represented by an amount of currency. Maybe there's 100 Swiss francs and you want to know the value in euros. You do this by dividing the 100 by the exchange rate to France. The value of the French franc is represented by an amount of currency. Maybe there's 100 French francs and you want to know the value in Polish zlotys. The value of the Polish zlotys can be represented by an amount of currency. Maybe there's 100 Polish zlotys and you want to know the value in Brazilian reals. The value of the Brazilian real is represented by an amount of currency. You've now added all the values that you wanted to exchange. The next step is to get the total values that you need. The total value of 100 Swiss francs is 100 * 1000 Swiss francs. The total value of 100 French francs is 100 * 1000 French francs. The total value of 100 Polish zlotys is 100 * 1000 Polish zlotys. The total value of 100 Brazilian reals is 100 * 1000 Brazilian reals 6a5afdab4c

-----Sofar the project has only been tested on the Yahoo! homepage. When it comes to other websites, please report your findings to the project owner via github in order to include them in the project. But feel free to tinker with it and report any bugs you may find to the github bug tracker. Short Description: ----- CreOFF CURRENCY Calculator is a small, simple and useful widget that will enable you to easily perform quick conversions between various currencies. The rates are updated regularly so you will be working with up-to-date currency information. The widget can do basic calculations like  $(100+21)^5$  in any of the fields. It's a simple widget but I have made it modular so that if you want to include some more currencies in your 'calculations' you can just paste new data into the data fields and reload the widget. One of my most appreciated features is the automatic currency selector (currency symbol selector field) because it's often needed and you are not sure what to select. Simply say the amount to currency (USD, EUR, RUB, GBP, etc.) and you are all set. Features: ----- - Also supports multiple currencies (USD, EUR, RUB, GBP, etc.) and the ability to easily change between them. - The widget easily pops out from the 'Get Widgets' page. - The widget has both a Sqrt based and a Pee basis calculation. - Internal currency selector works even when there is no currency symbol in the amount to currency field. - The currency selector field has a feature that can recognize the currency symbol as well as a full currency name or symbol. - Currency selector field works with decimal amounts as well. - Supports any of the number data formats. - Has all the basic calculation controls (show/hide, enabled/disabled). - Supports data inputs (number, date, datetime, or time) and outputs (number, datetime, date, text or HTML). - You can control whether to automatically include the amount to currency before or after the amount. This is a free widget, you need to have JS enabled. [HELP] How to install it? ----- 1.) After you have downloaded the widget from this page, you need to copy the GETWIDGET folder into your My Yahoo! folder on your hard drive. 2.) Scroll down and click on
