Mail that contained some well-known passwords as a part of a DDoS attack last week. It turns out that the account had been hacked and was being used in a DDoS attack on a security company that detected the attempt. The experts revealed the mail account in a post on their blog and also published a video that described how the leak happened. The data was exposed and was later verified by the security company. Based on security experts' analysis, the passphrases included in the leaked data are: Yahoo – Password,yahoo Password,yahoo Yahoo Mail – Password,yahoo,yahoo.com Password,yahoo,yahoo.com Ruby- On Rails – yahoo.com,yahoo Yahoo.com,yahoo Hackers – sa – yahoo.com,yahoo,

Only one part will fit!.Q: Can't iterate over a String I'm using Ruby/Rails, and I'm trying to iterate over a string. I have this script: @a = "Hello, World!" puts "max length of word is: #{@a.length}".size puts @a[0, 3] it is returning 'Hello, World!', rather than "H", "e", "l", "l", "o", " ", "W", "o", "r", "l", "d", and I'm not sure why. When I run @a.size, it returns 20. I was reading that you can iterate using (you guessed it) for, using the following syntax: for i in a puts i end But even this returns the same thing. How do I get it to only iterate over 3 characters at a time? Edit this is where I'm having a problem: puts @a[0, 2] shouldn't this simply return "Hello", "World"? A: You're confusing the way strings are indexed with the behavior of your loop. strings are made up of individual characters, so when you use for i in a loop, the loop will continue enumerating over individual characters in the string. You'd have to have something like: for i in 0..@a.length puts @a[i, 2] end In general, you can use any index where the value is included in the size of the string. Also note that there are other ways of 3e33713323
