Searching for the best antivirus software for Android can be a daunting task, especially if you're a first-time user. For you, the first question should be: Do you even need antivirus at all? Fortunately, the answer is definitely not! Being able to uninstall and reinstall your phone at a moment's notice means that you simply cannot keep your laptop safe, since you only really need the security software if you either: - Are restoring your device with a SD card or have multiple copies on your phone - Or if you're planning on buying a 2nd phone within the next 3 months Antivirus software doesn't do anything special. It doesn't change how your phone works or how you can use it. Your antivirus is simply there in case any unwanted virus gets on your phone. So, the only real reason to get antivirus software is if you actually want to keep your phone safe, because once you go to jail for rooting your smartphone, you're going to need antivirus to keep your data safe, right? Only if you have multiple devices, or plan on buying a second phone within the next 3 months, are you going to need antivirus protection. If you want to keep your phone safe while rooting, removing a virus, installing custom ROM, or flashing a custom recovery, having antivirus software is a good idea.

If you're using an SD card to restore your phone, an antivirus is a bit of a bonus. You won't need it, but it's great to have on hand. If you're doing the full factory reset to backup your data, you'll also want antivirus, unless you're restoring from another device. To make sure that your phone is safe while restoring, rooting, or flashing your phone with a custom recovery, use CB-50 as an antivirus. It scans your system in the background and will prevent anything from running if there is a virus. If you're concerned about the security of your phone, don't root your phone. Instead, use a custom ROM for your device. To protect your device while rooting your phone with the Magisk app, you'll want a good antivirus software. If you have the Samsung user app, you can just use it for this, and it will make sure that your phone is safe while you're rooting. To keep your files safe while your phone is partitioned, your phone is fully encrypted, or you
